Public speaking is one of the most important forms of communication. It can have an enormous impact on one's interpersonal interactions as well as one's career. A current way to present your ideas to the world is a short pitch, a story, or posts on social networks. You should hook the attention from the first minute. During our course we will learn this type of communication. We will analyze the approaches and skills that are necessary when you present your project to a team, talk to a customer, interview online or live, host an event, communicate with investors, correspond by mail and messengers, or speak at a conference. The students will boost their courage to speak up and will significantly improve their public speaking and presentation skills through speaking, listening, analyzing videos, providing peer feedback, and writing reflection journals. Get ready to practice and upgrade your skills!
